JULY 2, 1776

A PIVOTAL DAY IN AMERICAN HISTORY

On July 2, 1776, the Continental Congress took critical steps that set the stage for American independence.

INDEPENDENCE VOTED IN CONGRESS

The Continental Congress voted in favor of Lee's Resolution for Independence in a closed session. This historic vote declared that the American colonies were, and of right ought to be, free and independent states.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE APPOINTED

Congress appointed a Committee of Five—Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert R. Livingston—to draft a formal declaration of independence.

INDEPENDENCE DEBATED

The subject of independence was debated at length. Delegates expressed hopes, concerns, and convictions as they considered the momentous decision.

NEXT STEPS SET IN MOTION

Congress resolved to move forward with a declaration of independence, and the Committee of Five began the important work that would lead to the final adoption on July 4, 1776.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.”
